Tabernacle
of Praise

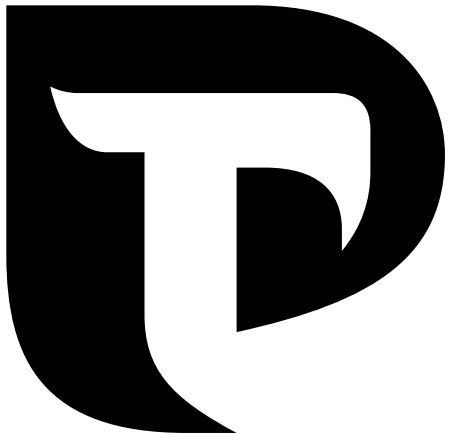

Four folded faces hold a shared open space. Their uneven rise and fall suggests a gathered community responding in praise.

Watch: May resemble architecture, a cultural venue or a property identity. Praise remains abstract.

02 / Open Praise

New contrasting proposal · for review

Tabernacle
of Praise

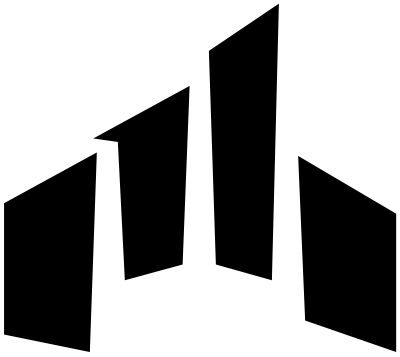

A P-like outer contour holds an open negative T. Tabernacle and Praise meet through one counterform, with the opening suggesting welcome.

Watch: The two letters may not be equally obvious at first glance. The monogram may suggest a publisher, creative studio or luxury identity.

Discuss the form first: which feels more distinctive, welcoming and appropriate for Tabernacle of Praise? No identity decision is final.

64 px 32 px 24 px 16 px

At 16 px, two adjacent faces touch through antialiasing. Four separate faces survive at 24 px and above; spatial depth is clearest at 32 px and above.

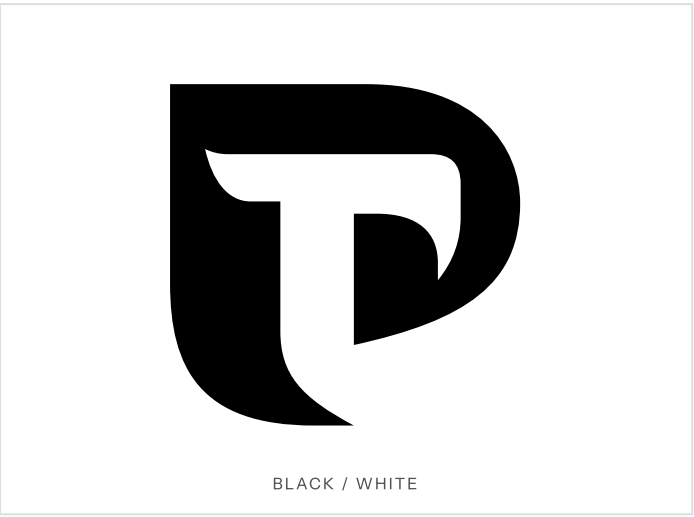

Native-source PNG samples at labelled CSS widths. This board is exported at 2×; use the editable SVG or browser proof for a 1:1 pixel check.

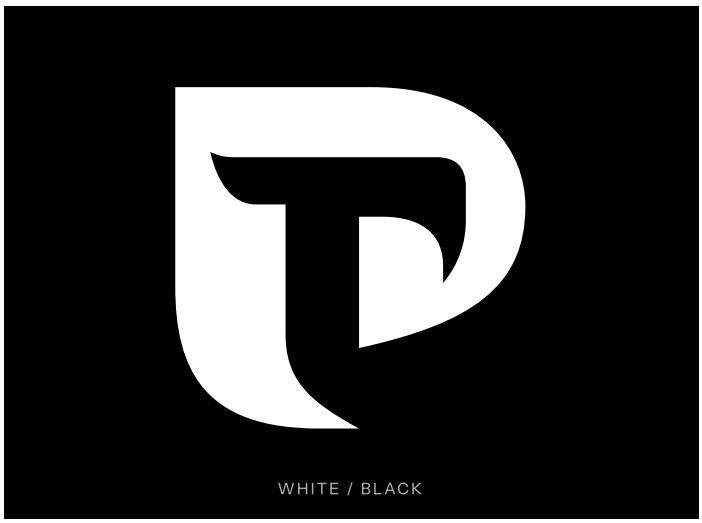

Team question: Does the open gathering space and cadence communicate the right feeling?

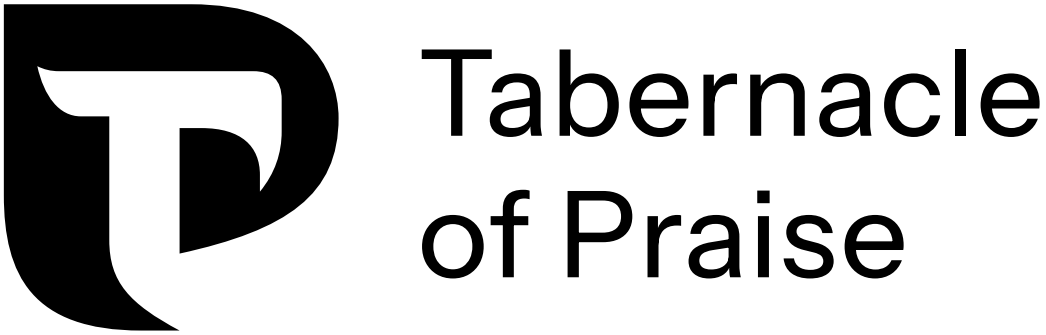

Official RCCG emblem is separate. Its source PNG is absent; actual emblem pairing has not been verified. Instrument Sans is temporary common companion lettering.

Open Praise

MEANING TO TEST

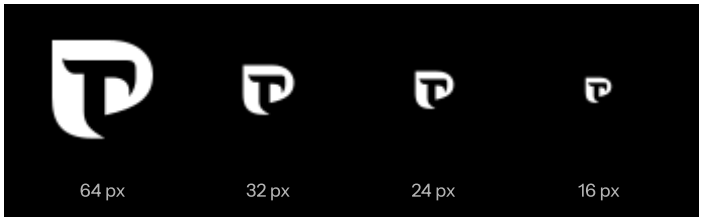

A P-like outer contour holds an open negative T. Tabernacle and Praise meet through one counterform, with the opening suggesting welcome.

MAIN RISK

The two letters may not be equally obvious at first glance. The monogram may suggest a publisher, creative studio or luxury identity.

SMALL-SIZE EVIDENCE

The broad opening survives these samples. At 16 px, the tapered hook softens; 24–32 px gives clearer letter reading. The T remains a reading to test.
