Three concepts. Five color directions.

B/C retain their existing geometry; D introduces a new original shared-space direction. Equal presentation conditions. Light and dark for every palette. Proposed HEX values.

Two palettes. Three concepts to weigh.

1 / Teal & sand

The strongest contemporary distinction with tactile warmth. Keep sand as a surface and gold as a measured accent.

2 / Navy & gold

A dignified, dependable alternative with a strong dark-on-light foundation. Familiar territory; the mark must supply distinction.

What the marks visibly communicate

B is a harp-led musical direction; its shelter association is weaker. C identifies the name through a T/P monogram. D encloses shared space and opens into three rising bands, suggesting praise through rhythm. These are design intentions, not established church doctrine.

C / Current durability benchmark

C remains the current benchmark for a durable identifier, with its T/P channel and editorial character still open to refinement. B needs a small-size string solution.

D / New shared-space challenger

D gives the sacred-dwelling association more visual weight. Its enclosing surround and rising bands connect shared space with praise, although the bands can also suggest leaves or growth. No replacement is approved.

- The official RCCG emblem remains separate; an authorized source asset is pending.
- Screen HEX values require real print and material proofing.
- Final geometry, typography, palette, and approval remain open.
